Which country's court is responsible?

Portugal

1 Should I apply to an ordinary civil court or to a specialised court (for example an employment labour court)?

The general rule under Portuguese law is that district courts (tribunais de comarca) are competent to prepare and hear cases concerning matters that do not fall under the jurisdiction of other courts. District courts have both general and specialist competence (Article 80 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013). Jurisdiction is divided between the courts according to subject matter, value, rank and territory. (Articles 37, 40, 41, 42 and 43 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013).

This question is governed by the following legislation:

Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013 \(Law on the Organisation of the Judicial System\)

Decree-Law No 49/2014 of 27 March 2014 \(Rules applicable to the Organisation and Functioning of the Courts\)

2 Where the ordinary civil courts have jurisdiction (i.e. these are the courts which have responsibility for such cases) how can I find out which one I should apply to?

As mentioned above, the jurisdiction of the district courts is defined by default, i.e., they are competent to prepare and hear cases concerning matters that do not fall under the jurisdiction of other courts. District courts are divided into benches (juízos) of specialised and general competence, as well as local benches (Article 81 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013).

To find out whether you should go to the local civil bench of general competence, or to a central specialised bench, please see the reply to question 3 below. For example, you should go to the central civil bench for declaratory actions under the common procedure with a value exceeding €50 000 (Article 117 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013).

2.1 Is there a distinction between lower and higher ordinary civil courts (for example district courts as lower courts and regional courts as higher courts) and if so which one is competent for my case?

Yes. There is a distinction between higher and lower courts for the purpose of appealing court judgments. As a general rule, the Supreme Court of Justice (Supremo Tribunal de Justiça) hears appeals with a value exceeding the limit of the appeal courts (tribunais da Relação) and appeal courts hear cases with a value exceeding the limit of the courts of first instance (tribunais judiciais de primeira instância) (Article 42 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013).

The limits are laid down in Article 44 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013.

To determine which court is competent, it is necessary to apply the rules on competence based on subject matter, value, rank and territory laid down in Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013.

2.2 Territorial jurisdiction (is the court of city/town A or of city/town B competent for my case?)

The question of territorial jurisdiction is governed by Article 43 of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013.

To find out whether the court of city A or city B is competent, you must consult Annexes I, II and III of Law No 62/2013 of 26 August 2013.
