Tools for finding legal professionals in EU countries

If you are looking to access company information from the national business registers, you may search the "Find a company" section.

If you are confronted with a legal dispute or seek legal advice you may need to turn to a lawyer.

If you need to ensure legal security and effectiveness for a private document or enforce a deed or seek an arbitrator for a dispute or, even simply, obtain legal advice, you may need to turn to a notary.

lf you need to understand and be understood during a hearing held in another Member State, need legal translation for a document or a contract, need interpretation in court, at a police station or before administrative authorities you may want to turn to a legal translator or a legal interpreter. If you decide to use mediation you would meet with a mediator who can help you talk things through and reach an agreement.

The court or one of the parties can request the services of an expert if expertise on a certain subject is required during court proceedings.

If you need to examine an object or a situation requiring a specialist in the field you can ask for the services of a forensic expert. Last update: 04/02/2021
