Mediator

Hvis du beslutter dig for at benytte dig af mægling, kontakter du en forligsmand– en uafhængig, neutral tredjepart – der kan hjælpe jer med at diskutere tingene igennem og nå til enighed.

Forligsmænd er uddannet til at hjælpe folk med at løse deres konflikter. En forligsmand mødes med de to parter, finder frem til, hvad det er parterne ikke kan blive enige om, og hjælper dem med at nå til enighed. Forligsmænd er neutrale og tager ikke parti i en konflikt. Forligsmænd er ikke rådgivere og giver ikke vejledning om den enkeltes stilling. Normalt anbefaler de, at man søger juridisk rådgivning samtidig med mæglingssprocessen.

Mægling kan især være nyttigt i familiestridigheder på tværs af grænser og i sager om forældres bortførelse af børn. I sådanne situationer opfordres forældre til at tage ansvar for deres beslutninger om deres familie og løse konflikterne uden om retssytemet. Mægling kan derfor hjælpe med at skabe en konstruktiv atmosfære for drøftelser og sikre rimelige aftaler mellem forældrene, som også tager højde for barnets interesse.

Detaljerede oplysninger om, hvordan man finder en forligsmand (f.eks. hvordan man får adgang til mæglingsydelser, hvad det koster, og rådgivning om forligsmænd), kan fås ved at klikke på et af flagene til højre.

Mediators - Bulgaria

This section explains how to find a mediator in Bulgaria.

How to find a mediator in Bulgaria

The Ministry of Justice maintains the Unified Register of Mediators.
The register contains the following information:
Personal information about the individuals registered as mediators – education, languages spoken and additional qualifications in the field of mediation
Contact information of the mediator – office address, telephone and email
In addition to this, the Ministry of Justice maintains a list of the organisations that have been approved to provide training for mediators.
Entries in the register and in the list of organisations are based on the provisions of:
The Mediation Act
Regulation No 2 of 15 March 2007 (issued by the Minister for Justice), which sets out the conditions and procedure for approving organisations that provide training for mediators; the training requirements for mediators; the procedure for entering, striking off and deleting mediators from the Unified Register of Mediators; and the procedural and ethical rules for the conduct of mediators.
Is access to the Bulgarian register of mediators free of charge?
You can access the Bulgarian Unified Register of Mediators free of charge from the website of the Ministry of Justice. Individuals and organisations wishing to be included in the list of organisations providing training in mediation skills have to pay a fee.
How to search for a mediator in Bulgaria
On the Ministry of Justice's website, you can find a complete list of persons trained and authorised to conduct mediation in the Republic of Bulgaria. You can search for mediators by training organisation, education, knowledge of foreign languages and additional specifications in relation to the area of mediation (e. g. commercial, business or family mediation).
Contact information is available, including a telephone number and email address, where you can contact them to receive any additional information you need.

Mediators - Estonia

This section will help you find a mediator in Estonia.

Estonia does not have a general website or database concerning mediators. Pursuant to the Conciliation Act, anyone meeting the requirements laid down in the Act may act as a conciliator. There is no State monitoring of the activities of conciliators.

Pursuant to the Conciliation Act, the following may be a conciliator:

a natural person entrusted by the parties with carrying out the conciliation procedure and helping to resolve the dispute. The conciliator may act through a legal person with whom they are in an employment or other contractual relationship;

an attorney-at-law – the list of members of the Estonian Bar Association is available on its website;

a notary – a list of notary's offices is available on the website of the Chamber of Notaries;

in the case laid down in the Conciliation Act, a State or local government conciliation body.

Some copyright-related disputes (cf. the Copyright Act) are resolved by a committee of copyright experts in the role of conciliator. This committee has been set up under the Ministry of Justice.

Although the concept of 'ombudsman' is not used in the Chancellor of Justice Act, the Chancellor of Justice also performs the functions of an ombudsman, in monitoring whether government bodies comply with people's fundamental rights and freedoms and with the principles of good governance and also monitoring local governments, legal persons in public law and private entities performing public functions. Since 2011 the Chancellor of Justice has also performed the functions of the ombudsman for children under Article 4 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. You can find out more on the website of the Chancellor of Justice.

Resolving collective labour disputes is the function of the Public Conciliator, and more information is available on the website.

You can also contact the following non-government organisations:

The Estonian Union for Child Welfare is a non-profit association that supports children's rights. Its activities include giving advice to parents who wish to separate or divorce, encouraging them to use the services of conciliators in order to protect their children's interests. The Union has organised training sessions on the subject of family mediation.

The Estonian Insurance Association has set up an insurance conciliation body to deal with resolving insurance disputes out of court. Formally speaking, it is a conciliator and not a conciliation body within the meaning of the Conciliation Act.

The Estonian Motor Insurance Bureau has set up a motor insurance conciliation body to deal with resolving motor insurance disputes out of court. Formally speaking, it is a conciliator and not a conciliation body within the meaning of the Conciliation Act.

In Estonia, family mediators are currently represented by the Estonian Association of Mediators and the Mediation Institute.

Mediators - Spain

Where can I find information on mediation?

The Register of Mediators and Mediation Institutions (Registro de Mediadores e Instituciones de Mediación) is a computerised database accessible free of charge on the website of the Ministry of Justice. As a public register of professional mediators and mediation institutions, it facilitates access to citizens to mediation for dispute settlement.

Access the browsers:

Search for Mediators

Search for Mediation Institutions

However, registration in the Register of Mediators and Mediation Institutions is not compulsory for mediators or institutions. It is also possible to find a mediator directly through mediation institutions, including professional associations and Chambers of Commerce, Industry, Services and Shipping, many of which have set up mediation centres which will provide the appropriate mediator for the case in question. Access to mediation is also facilitated by mediation associations specialising in family, civil, commercial or general matters.

In cases where the courts refer a matter to mediation, the courts have channels for referral to the mediation institutions within their sphere of responsibility. These institutions, too, will enable the parties to find the appropriate mediator.

Mediation

Mediation is a means of dispute settlement, whatever it may be called, in which two or more parties voluntarily attempt to reach an agreement themselves with the intervention of a mediator acting impartially and neutrally.

Mediator

Mediators may be natural persons fully exercising their civil rights, provided that this is not precluded by the legislation they may be subject to when exercising their profession.

Legal persons providing mediation services, whether they are professional companies or any other laid down by law, must designate as a mediator a natural person who meets the legal requirements.

Requirements to be a mediator

The mediator must have an official university degree or advanced vocational training and specific training to practise mediation, acquired by following one or more specific courses taught by appropriately accredited institutions, which will be valid for the exercise of the mediation activity anywhere in the country. In Spain, mediators are required to have at least 100 hours of this specific training, which must be updated through continuous training.

Mediators must take out insurance or an equivalent guarantee covering the civil liability arising from their intervention in the conflicts in which they mediate.

Bankruptcy mediator (mediador concursal)

Bankruptcy mediators are natural persons who meet the requirements to be a mediator and those laid down in Article 27.1 of Insolvency Law 22/2003 of 9 July 2003 to be an insolvency administrator and may be designated as such by Notaries or Commercial Registrars in the out-of-court payment agreements referred to in Title X of that Law. Legal persons may also be bankruptcy mediators provided they act in bankruptcy mediation through a natural person who meets the above-mentioned conditions. These mediators will be designated sequentially from among those included in the official list of the portal of the Official State Gazette, which is drawn up on the basis of the information provided by the Register of Mediators and Mediation Institutions. Traders may also apply to the Chambers of Commerce, Industry, Services and Shipping to appoint a mediation panel for them, which must include a bankruptcy mediator and will assist them in negotiating the out-of-court payment agreement.

Mediation Institution

Mediation institutions are Spanish or foreign public or private entities and public-law corporations whose purpose includes promoting mediation and enabling access to and administration of mediation, including the appointment of mediators, which must be done transparently. If their purpose also includes arbitration, they will adopt measures to ensure that the two activities are kept separate.

The mediation institution will not be able to provide the mediation service directly. This means that the institution itself is not the mediator, but it must make known the identity of the mediators within its sphere of responsibility and provide information on their training, speciality and experience, thereby helping the parties to choose the mediator who can best assist them.

Pursuant to the Mediation Act (Narodne novine (NN; Official Gazette of the Republic of Croatia) No 18/11) and the Rules on the register of mediators and standards for the accreditation of mediation institutions and mediators (NN No 59/11), the Ministry of Justice keeps a Register of mediators.

Find a mediator

Out-of-court mediation procedures have been very successfully carried out for many years by the Mediation Centres of the Croatian Chamber of Commerce, the Croatian Chamber of Trades and Crafts and the Croatian Employers' Association, as well as by the Croatian Mediation Association, the Croatian Bar Association, the Croatian Insurance Board and the Social Partnership Office of the Government of the Republic of Croatia. However, mediation with a selected mediator may also take place outside the abovementioned centres.

Mediators - Lithuania

There is no centralised body responsible for mediation in Lithuania. Once Directive 2008/52/EC has been implemented, work will commence in this area.

How to find a mediator in Lithuania

Court and out-of-court mediation are possible in Lithuania. Out-of-court mediation services are usually provided by lawyers.

Court mediation is a dispute resolution procedure which aims to help parties in civil cases resolve their dispute peacefully through the intercession of one or more mediators (intermediaries).

Court meditation is performed by mediators. These are specially trained judges, judicial assistants or other suitably qualified persons whose names have been included on the List of court mediators. At its meeting on 28 January 2011, the Judicial Council agreed that court mediation in civil proceedings could be applied in all of Lithuania's courts and that this service should be available irrespective of region.

Court mediation is a service provided free of charge, Furthermore, choosing to resolve a civil dispute using court mediation saves a considerable amount of time and effort otherwise wasted in litigation. Money is also saved, as 75 % of court fees are reimbursable when court mediation results in an amicable settlement.

A proposal to refer a civil case for court mediation can be made by the presiding judge. A wish for this to be done can be expressed by any party to the proceedings. When referring a dispute for court mediation, the judge explains the concept of the court mediation process to the parties. The appointment or replacement of a mediator is decided by the President of the court, the Head of the Court's Civil Case Department, or a judge appointed by them. Two mediators can be appointed if necessary. When appointing a mediator, the opinion of the parties in making the request or consenting to refer the dispute for court mediation must be taken into account.

Only parties to the proceedings, third parties and their representatives may participate in court mediation. Other persons whose participation may help resolve the dispute may also add their names to the request or consent of either party. Court mediation proceedings are not recorded.
Court mediation proceedings may be terminated if the parties come to an agreement on the matter in dispute and sign a court settlement, which is then approved by the presiding judge.

Mediators - Malta

How to find a mediator in Malta

The Malta Mediation Centre provides parties with a list of mediators duly accredited by the Centre. Whether in the case of voluntary mediation or a mediation case referred to the Centre by the court or by law, a mediator is selected by the disputing parties from the list of accredited mediators, provided that the person chosen is acceptable to all of them. If the parties do not agree upon a mediator who is acceptable to them all, the Centre will appoint as mediator the person whose name is next on the list of approved mediators.

In family mediation, parties may select, by mutual consent, a mediator of their choice from a list of persons appointed by the Minister for Justice for that purpose (in which case the parties bear the costs of mediation themselves) or, alternatively, the Court assigns a mediator, on a rota basis, from the list of persons appointed by the Minister for Justice to act as court-appointed mediators (in which case the fees due to the mediators are paid by the Registrar of the Civil Courts and Tribunals).

No electronic register currently exists. However, if you would like more information, you can consult the relevant page of the Centre's website or contact the Centre via the Registrar at the Malta Mediation Centre, 158 Triq il-Merkanti, Valletta, VLT 1176.

You can contact the Registrar on +356 23279220 or at info@mediation.mt.

Mediators - Netherlands

This page will help you find a mediator in the Netherlands.

How to find a mediator in the Netherlands

There are various (private) registers of mediators in the Netherlands. There are no legal provisions guaranteeing quality. One major register is the register kept by the Dutch Mediators' Federation (Mediatorsfederatie Nederland, MfN). There is also the ADR International Register.

The Federation also provides impartial information and quality assurance regarding mediation and mediators in the Netherlands. MfN-registered mediators are trained and qualified to work as mediators in line with the MfN Mediation Rules (MfN-Mediationreglement). They have undertaken to apply the MfN's quality assurance system. The Mediator Quality Foundation (Stichting Kwaliteit Mediators) handles complaints about MfN mediators.

The Legal Aid Board (Raad voor Rechtsbijstand) has a special register of mediators who are allowed to take on legal-aid cases.

Is access to the mediators' database free of charge?

Yes, access is free of charge.

How to search for a mediator in the Netherlands

You can search the registers using different search criteria. For instance, you can search for a mediator who has specific expertise in a given field of activity or a mediator who works in a particular region.

Mediators - Poland

This section helps you to find a mediator in Poland.

How to find a mediator in Poland

Lists or registers of institutions and persons authorised to conduct mediation proceedings are kept by regional courts and can be found on their websites.
Mediators, including persons from lists drawn up by non-governmental organisations (in accordance with their statutory tasks) and educational establishments, are added to and removed from the lists by the president of the regional court with jurisdiction.
As a rule, mediators specialise in specific types of mediation: civil mediation (commercial mediation, family mediation, employment law, etc.), mediation in criminal matters or in cases involving minors.
Among mediators in civil matters there are permanent mediators who have been added to the list maintained by the president of the regional court with jurisdiction.
Due to the legal arrangements in place, there is no single centrally kept register of mediators.
Basic information on rules, procedures and practical aspects of the mediation arrangements in Poland can be found on the Mediation page of the website of the Ministry of Justice.

Is access to the lists of mediators free of charge?

Yes, access to the lists of mediators is free of charge.

How to find a mediator in Poland

You should use the lists of mediators drawn up by regional court presidents, or use the services of mediation centres or individual mediators. Information and contact details can usually be found on the website of the competent courts, centres or mediators.

Mediators - Portugal

This page tells you how to find a mediator in Portugal.

Conflict mediators working in one of the public mediation services or in small claims courts (julgados de paz – justices of the peace) must be enrolled on the lists of professionals authorised to practise mediation. Enrolment on the lists is governed by Ministerial Implementing Order (Portaria) No 282/2010 of 25 May 2010 and Ministerial Implementing Order No 283/2010 of 19 October 2010.
The Directorate-General for Justice Policy (Direção-Geral da Política de Justiça – DGPJ), which comes under the Ministry of Justice, is responsible for regulating public mediation. Although the DGPJ does not provide information on how to find a mediator, it does publish the above-mentioned lists of mediators, which can be consulted here:

Mediators - Scotland

This section helps you to find a mediator in Scotland.

How to find a mediator in Scotland

Scottish Mediation administers the Scottish Mediation Register (SMR), which provides an independent register of mediators and mediation services who meet minimum 'practice standards' for mediating in Scotland. These standards are set by an independent Practice Standards committee and require minimum levels of training, experience and continuing professional development (CPD).

The 'find a mediator' page of the Scottish Mediation website offers free access to information about people who practise all kinds of mediation. The data on the page is updated by the mediators at least once a year and includes information on their training, CPD and areas of expertise.

One of the aims of the Scottish Mediation Register is to reassure people of the professional quality of the mediators they select by certifying that they meet the minimum standards. Mediators who appear on the SMR can call themselves a 'Scottish Mediation Registered Mediator' and use the SMR logo next to their name.

The Scottish Mediation office also administers the Scottish Mediation Helpline, which provides advice and information for people on mediation and how to access it. Through the Helpline, Scottish Mediation can also arrange mediations through a panel of mediators on the SMR or refer people to an appropriate mediation service.

Scottish Mediation also supports and promotes the process of mediation for NHS complaints in Scotland – this work is funded by the Scottish Government. Further information about mediation and how to access it can be found on the Scottish Mediation website.

The Scottish Government has also published advice on resolving disputes without going to court, including advice about mediation, on the mygov.scot website.

Is access to the mediators' database free of charge?

Yes, access to information about mediators is free of charge.

To search for a mediator you can do following:

Access the website by clicking on the link to the Scottish Mediation Register or type the URL http://www.scottishmediation.org.uk/find-a-mediator/ into your browser and then follow the instructions to find the best mediator for you and your circumstances.
Contact Scottish Mediation via their website, by writing to them at 18 York Place, Edinburgh EH1 3EP, UK or telephoning them on +44 (0) 131 556 1221.
